CUP CRASH 4 DRIVERS HURT HEMERY WINS

19 MACHINES STARTED FOR $5,000 PRIZE

DRIVER LYTTLE AND MECHANICIAN TATTERSTALL IN ACCIDENT AT TO-DAY'S VANDERBILT CUP AUTO RACE.

Beats Heath by 14 Seconds in Nearly 300-Mile Run for Vanderbilt Cup—Lancia and Christie Thrown Out by Accident—Tatterstall in Smashup.

By Boston American Special Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Hemery, driving an eighty-horse power Darracq car, won the Vanderbilt auto race over the Mineola course to-day.

The finish with Heath was a heartbreaking one. Hemery won by fourteen seconds.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Nineteen death defying autoists started in the Vanderbilt $5,000 cup race at 6 o'clock to-day over the Mineola course of 283 miles, and within four hours there had come half a dozen serious accidents, in which four persons were injured, and several cars put out of the race.

Foxhall Keene was one of the first to suffer accident, being badly struck by a smash, in which his car was partially wrecked and withdrawn. Christie was badly hurt also; Mechanician Tatterstall was hurt, as was Chevrolet, the Frenchman.

Lancia led the race up to the seventh round when a collision put him out for a time, and George Heath lost year's winner, took the lead. Lancia later returned to the course and will probably finish. He is reported to have been badly shaken up by the smash in which he figured.

10,000 WATCH TEST.

The hundred thousand persons who were watching the great race, among them the spectators at the track, were kept busy for a time, and George Heath lost year's winner, took the lead. Lancia later returned to the course and will probably finish. He is reported to have been badly shaken up by the smash in which he figured.

The original cause of the falling back of Lancia in the race was a tire which burst at once to a hospital when the car was stopped to repair this and let the tire. When he returned to the course, he was running at a disadvantage, and when he was overtaken by Heath, he was forced to stop for several minutes, but finally returned to the track.

HEATH FORGES AHEAD.

Heath, who had been running second, gradually won the lead, and at 10:30 o'clock he was comfortably going at sixty miles an hour, and was in the lead. He was followed by Lancia, who was running third, and by Christie, who was running fourth.

GRANTS THREATEN TO STRIKE AFTER TO-DAY

NEW YORK PLAYERS NOT SATISFIED OVER THE DIVISION OF GATE RECEIPTS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—All interest that the ball players have in the gate receipts of the championship series ended with the game of yesterday. Under the agreement framed by the National Commission and adopted by the players, the players were to receive 50 per cent of the gross receipts of the first four games, 40 per cent of the gross receipts of the last four games, and 30 per cent of the gross receipts of the last four games. The players are not satisfied with this division of the gate receipts, and they are threatening to strike after to-day.

SIR HENRY RIVING DIES OF HEART FAILURE

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Sir Henry Riving died in Bradford, Yorkshire, of syncope at 11:30 o'clock last night just after his return to his hotel from the theatre, where he had played "Reckless" in Lord Riving's play of that name. The news of his death, which shocked the whole world, came from his manager, John Storer, in a telegram which said: "Very terrible news. Sir Henry Riving died at his hotel last night after a short illness." The cause of death was heart failure.

BOSTON GIRLS PLAY FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Miss Margaret Curtis and Miss Pauline Mackay Contest for Title.

Special to the Boston American. CONVENT STATION, N. J., Oct. 14.—Miss Margaret Curtis and Miss Pauline Mackay, both of Boston, met on the Morris County links at 11 o'clock today to play the match which decides who is to be the women's national golf champion. This final match in the national championship tournament was seen by the largest gallery of any of the tournament days. All the defending champions who were able to remain here till today are present. New York and suburban society, people from city and country houses, in autos and horse vehicles, rode out to see this deciding match between two young women from Boston who had beaten the cleverest women golfers of the whole country.

Have Met Twice Before.

Each attended by a coterie of friends went to the clubhouse, picked her clubs carefully and set out toward the first teeing ground. The young championship contestants, hardly out of their teens, were on hand in due season, each one wearing rich and colorful, but not overdone, costumes. The match was a very close one, and the girls played with great skill and spirit. The match was a very close one, and the girls played with great skill and spirit.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN MURDER CASE

MRS. COOPER IS CHARGED WITH KILLING OF YOUNG NORTHLEY AT HER HOME.

South Winoher, Me., Oct. 14.—Charged with the murder of Charles D. Northley, Jr., at her home on Tuesday, Mrs. Edwin J. Cooper has been arrested by High Sheriff Ham, and is now in the Kennebec County Jail at Augusta. The police declare that jealousy was the motive for the crime. Mrs. Cooper did not seem at all surprised by her arrest. "I expected it," she said. She still contends that Northley committed suicide, and says that had he recovered consciousness after being found he would have cleared her from suspicion.

Woman Bought Revolver. According to her own statement to the coroner, Mrs. Cooper, alarmed by the strangling of Northley's father at Bradford, had purchased a revolver on Monday with which to protect herself. This revolver, she said, she had in her pocket on Tuesday when Northley arrived at her home. She was sitting in her bedroom, and Northley came in and asked her to let him use the revolver. She refused, and he threatened to kill her. She then fled to her room, and he followed her. She then fled to her room, and he followed her.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

His Adventures at Sea

BY CAPTAIN RICHARD RUDD

Copyright, 1905, by American Journal-Examiner.

LITTLE did Jack dream that the carriage which he thought was carrying him to find Hunsdon was taking him to ambush. He was so enraptured at the prospect of capturing his old enemy in Hunsdon, instead of having to follow him to Japan, that he made haste to go. In the meantime Tony had been warned aboard the yacht by a message from Hunsdon's daughter, and had forced his way to the very doors of Hunsdon's retreat.

CHAPTER XI

A Battle in the Dark

WHEN Tony was following the girl through the streets in his effort to rescue her, Jack and his friends were journeying swiftly out of the city. Jack had insisted that the carriage turn right with the police officer, whose name was Pedro, dismissed him.

The head ahead of them, was rough, and they could not see but little.

Jack told them that Hunsdon was aboard the yacht by a message from Hunsdon's daughter, and had forced his way to the very doors of Hunsdon's retreat.

This was absolutely true. But he neglected to tell them that the old name was waiting with the party and that with him were two ragged Cuban desperadoes, armed with machine guns, each of them offered a reward of a hundred dollars, a fortune to them. If Jack and his party should be put to death, the reward would be paid to them.

Presently the carriage came to a narrow lane turning off to the right, through a maze of alleys, and into this the driver turned.

The lane, which had been only partially covered by a thin film of clouds, now hid behind a dark bank of fog, and the night grew more oppressive.

The carriage was brought down to a halt, and the driver, who was looking out the air as if he were very ill pleased with the turn which they had taken, said:

Pedro the Police
When they had journeyed along the lane for something more than a mile, the policeman pulled up his horse.

He turned to Jack with a voice tremulous with excitement.

"You must leave the wagon here," he said, "and go to the top of the hill. I will wait for you there. Look to the left, and you will see a light in a window. If you see it, go to it. If not, then that Hunsdon is hidden."

"If you come, you're coming too," said Jack.

"No! It would not be wise. I must wait here to make instant arrest. The reward of a hundred dollars is waiting for me. I must take it."

Jack hesitated. He thought of the glory of the "Hunsdon's arrest," and he knew that if he went, he would be a prisoner to all the forces of the city.

"I will go," he said, "but I will not leave you here. I will wait for you at the top of the hill. If you see a light in a window, go to it. If not, then that Hunsdon is hidden."

COPYRIGHT 1905 BY THE HOUSE OF KUPPENHEIMER

These two events should attract every man who appreciates honest clothing at a moderate price. The ten dollar suits would sell in the regular way for at least five dollars more and everyone who is a judge of clothing knows that a "Kuppenheimer" Overcoat at $15 is excellent value.

Men's Suits at $10 Might Easily Bring $15

They have that distinctive style and dash which will be welcomed by fashionable dressers. The coats are cut long, with broad shoulders and wide lapels, and made up from all the new fabrics, including fancy wools, chevrons, tweeds, cassimers and black tights. We would call special attention to the collars, which are very close fitting, a feature too often missing in much higher priced garments. All sizes Saturday. $10

"Kuppenheimer" Overcoats for $15

These are the overcoats which have the smart style effect. These are long, loose fitting coats with broad shoulders and collars high along the neck, to give that distinguished, made-to-measure look, showing that they were made especially for men who think that they can be fitted only by a first-class merchant tailor. Every garment has the maker's guarantee, 500 coats, right from the tailors' hands, on sale Saturday at $15

LABOR NEWS

For utilization of a fellow-member of the local union at the recent International Convention of Railway Engineers at Toronto, a delegate from Boston Railway Engineers' Union No. 14 was severely injured and died at last night's meeting. The accused member was completely exonerated.

James McCarthy, W. H. F. Whelan and J. B. Moran were appointed delegates to the Central Labor Union. Three new members were admitted. It was voted not to join the People's Legal Security Company.

KEEPS UNIONS MOVING.
The union made by the Elvessard street to regularly drive labor unions from Washington street to quieter meeting places.

The latest labor organization to succumb to the rear of passing trains is the Carpenter Union, which was driven from its room at 100 Washington street to Boston.

The Central Labor Union delegates are still from satisfied with their hall in the Wells Memorial Building, at No. 201 Washington street, which is now being used with some difficulty, especially in the summer, when it is necessary to open the windows. However, it is not only this, but a suitable hall with all modern conveniences.

Wells Memorial Building has been hit hard by the fire of the Elvessard street, which has been the cause of the union's being driven from its room at 100 Washington street to Boston.

CIQARMARKERS WITH TYPOS.
The heavy support of the Cigar-makers' Union was pledged the Typographical Union in its quest for an eight-hour day for the book and job printers throughout the United States at last night's meeting.

A stirring address was made by James P. Murphy of the Typographical Union, who urged the Cigar-makers' Union to attend the annual convention of the Cigar-makers' Union, which is being held at the Elvessard street, which has been the cause of the union's being driven from its room at 100 Washington street to Boston.

LABOR NOTES.
